BARNESVILLE WATER UPDATE

WATER PRESSURE CONCERNS?

Are you experiencing pressure drop at your faucets? It may be caused by galvanized pipe.

Why is galvanized piping not used in today's homes and businesses? Galvanized steel corrodes usually within 40 years of installation. This piping rusts from the inside out. Over time galvanized steel pipe might corrode to the point where the pipes are completely restricted. Another problem is the mismatch of metals. Whenever galvanized steel pipe meets copper or brass, you will see rapid corrosion of the steel pipe. Dielectric unions can be used between copper and steel to slow the corrosion, but this oftentimes breaks the electrical grounding effect if a live electrical wire comes in contact with a pipe.

Cities generally require that the two pipes be bonded electrically to maintain the safety of grounded pipes. Please take a moment to look at your water service line for both corrosion and electrical grounding. If your galvanized pipe is over 30 years old, you should plan on replacing it to maintain water flow and prevent leaks.

Please call Dan Lubbesmeyer 701.893.8825 or Brandon Anderson 701.893.8699 of PeopleService for any water service concerns.
